課程概述與目標：

The aim of this seminar is to orient students toward re-thinking the problematics of Inter-Asia Cultural Studies (IACS). Bearing in mind the complex relations and geopolitics of East/Southeast and South Asian societies, this seminar delimits its scope in order to foreground the questions and formations of present conditions, particularly the residues colonial past and the process of decolonization, the Cold War regime and the post-Cold War aftermath, the decline of Pax Americana and the shuffling of new powers as well as new tensions in the age of globalization and neoliberalism.

This course will also address several fundamental questions: “What is Cultural Studies?” “What is the objectives of Inter-Asia Cultural Studies?” “Is there any particular disciplinary methodology or theoretical framework that we need to adopt in doing Inter-Asia cultural Studies?” Questions such as race, class, nation, gender, migration, border, or modernity, capitalism, neoliberalism, cannot be dealt with through any conventional disciplinary. Also, the inter-connectedness of historical processes in this area obliges Inter-Asia Cultural Studies to go beyond national boundaries.

Inter-Asia Cultural Studies therefore needs to be transdisciplinary and transnational. Inter-Asia Cultural Studies would not take “Inter-Asia” as a totality of any pre-existing entity to retrieve or a future utopia to arrive at, but as an emergent mode of complex perspective, acknowledging the inter-relational conflicts and tensions in the past histories that have left their traces and are still functioning in contemporary societies. Inter-Asia Cultural Studies also needs to be improvisational and critical so as to expose and to dismantle the logic of socio-cultural formation behind the scene that is still shaping the uneven and unequal partitions within the societies.
